

Okay, we've loaded up our schedule with a number of ECC activities right before Thanksgiving... each event different from another...

Dorkbot

TradeMark G. of The Evolution Control Committee (www.Evolution-Control.Com) shows off a video controller for live mashups. Based on Johnny Chung Lee's Wiimote whiteboard hack, this rear-projected infrared-based faux touchscreen ended up being the solution for a performance bottleneck problem -- specifically, mousing quickly and accurately enough for live laptop show. Oh, and it looks one metric assload of a lot better on stage too.

Its mixed up live, and to prove it, the audience spins The Wheel Of Mashup to create new mash-ups on the spot. And your Host Bon D Rant spinning a mash-tastic set.
