Bearer of this license is authorized to practice art in the United States of America and its occupied territories. Bearer may without warning commit inexplicable actions in the name of art.

Hello soon-to-be fully licensed artist!

If you're like me, you're constantly getting asked things like, "Why on earth did you paint that toaster purple and install it on the ceiling?" or "Why do you drive a hearse that looks like a zebra?" Of course, the answer is all too simple: I'm an artist. I'm taking license to make this weirdness. It's called Artistic License.

Soon, you too will carry ID to back that claim up.

The Deal: $20 (US) buys you your very own US Artistic License with your photo and info on it. It is laminated (not overly thick, but heat-sealed) and looks a whole lotta legal. Although this is not legal ID (duh), you'd be surprised just how far it will take you. REALLY surprised.

And yes, for your information, I do have the authority to issue artistic licenses. Do you wanna see my license?
